To the revisionists approach, the Cold War was caused by the United States factor, rather than Soviet Union expansionism. They argued that at the end of World War II, the structure of international relations was not really in the bipolarity structure. The Soviet Union capabilities were much weaker than the United States.

We describe the reality of the bipolar Cold War and how it is only partly reflected in polarity theory and neorealism. The period was marked by the combination of power bipolarity (two superpowers), cluster bipolarity (bipolarization), and a military and ideological confrontation between two blocs with different economic and political regimes.

Bipolarity supposedly has offered the world a certain amount of stability during the period of the Cold War. The nuclear threat meant that the war was never allowed to get "warm" as the whole world population could be erased, this was an accepted, although tense, term, bound to the interdependence concept.

The bipolarity of the Cold War was changed into multipolarity due to the lack of political will of the United States to act on the unipolar moment. In 2001, and with a new president in office, the structure changed again. This time the G.W. Bush administration was keen to play the role of a global governor.

~~From Bipolarity to Bipolarity: International Relations ...~~

Bipolarity can be defined as a system of world order in which the majority of global economic, military and cultural influence is held between two states. The classic case of a bipolar world is that of the Cold War between the United States and the Soviet Union, which dominated the second half of the twentieth century.

With the fundamental assumptions of neorealism and social constructivism covered, this paper will proceed to evaluate how they explain three important dynamics of the Cold War- namely bipolarity, alliance behaviors of states and the end of the Cold War. Bipolarity during the Cold War. The literature is dominated with the characterization of the Cold War as being bipolar based upon the neorealist idea of the distribution of power (Wagner, 1993, pp. 77-98).
